Student Life

From the first step up the red carpet in the fall to the last clang of the senior door in June, 1964 was an exciting year, a different year. It seemed a little strange to come back to school because everything was so changed. It was hard to get used to the new offices, classes met in strange places, new teachers took the place of those who had left, and the crowds in the halls were a little bit thicker. But underneath the shiny veneer of newness, North Side was essentially the same. The purpose—to attain a good education—was not changed. The curriculum remained, and the familiar traditions were still followed.

Although it appeared as though North Side would burst its 37-year-old seams, we survived. With a large amount of cooperation between the student body and the faculty, the congestion difficulties were solved without too many head-on collisions. We grew in many other ways besides population. Our school spirit soared as we smashed the football jinx and survived until the final night of the sectionals in basketball. Our pride in our sports achievements was rivaled by the pride we felt at being the largest school in the city. North Side will continue to change and grow in the future, but it can never be the same as it was in 1964.

New Administration, Offices, Classroom Areas Among

The site of the new high school to be built in the near future is pointed out by Dr. Bill Anthis.

While the summer months whizzed by, movers scurried around in attempt to finish the new main office before school started.

Mrs. Hazel Coemey checks the attendance list as Mrs. Betty Loper telephones the absences for confirmation of their absences.

Big Changes Students Noticed at Beginning of Semester

Crossing lines and spending many hectic hours in the new school office, office personnel Miss Mary Waller and Mrs. Mary Kay Shutt help to keep the school running smoothly.

"Double, double, toil and trouble" dominated the atmosphere as confused students attempted to iron out flaws in their schedules.

When school started in September, the students noticed many changes had taken place on the inside of North Side, but the exterior of the school remained much the same as when it was constructed in 1927.

A very important change which concerned everyone at North Side was the appointment of the new principal, Dr. Bill C. Anthis. Dr. Anthis was the former Dean of Boys.

During the summer months while relaxing 'Skins and teachers were recuperating from the past school year, workmen reconstructed various sections of the interior of the school.

The old principal's office was converted into an attendance center. All of the necessities in the taking of attendance were kept in that office, making the job much more convenient. The former Dean of Girl's office was made into a guidance center. Students went to the guidance center seeking information concerning colleges and universities, help in planning their class schedules, and general guidance. The new main office was the center of constant activity, housing the offices of the principal, deans, athletic director, registrar, treasurer, and sectetaries. Problems arose in the main office during the first months of the semester as students struggled to learn which office belonged to whom. To lessen this problem, the ianitors placed attractive name plates over the various office doors.

The ivy grows a little thicker each year, the enrollment increases, and the rooms are redecorated and changed. But, it is still the same North Side.

Crowded Halls, Lunch Periods Dominated Atmosphere

Rushed Redskins includge in a quick lunch amid the towering piles of books, bulging purses, and the chattering of fellow students.

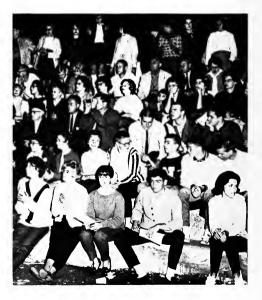

North Side began to feel the population explosion. The enrollment soared to a high of 2,500 students, giving North Side the largest population of the Fort Wayne High Schools.

Teachers again faced the annual problem of trying to learn the names and faces of the new students in each class. Classes were conducted in some of the rooms around the gymnasium as the need for more classroom area arose. Johnny's, familiar to Redskins for many years as a noon-time refuge, was converted to the art annex and given the name "Donnie's" for Mr. Donald McClead, the art teacher. Homerooms again were placed in the study hall, with additional homerooms in the gymnasium.

Familiar clamor sang through the cafeteria for all seven lunch periods. Fortunate students are in sparsely-filled lunch periods; those less fortunate gobbled their food in a lunchroom filled with rushed fellow students.

Halls and corridors were more crowded than before. Passing from class to class took more time because of expanded enrollment; No matter which route a student took to get to class, he met other people taking the same route to get to their classes. There were new faces, and faces that were familiar. Opportunities to make new friends were plentiful.

The physical changing of the school and the expanding enrollment combined to give us the North Side we knew in 1964.

Being crowded did not hinder the Redskin fans from cheering the football team on to victory at the South Side stadium.

As 2,500 Students Quickly Filled School To Capacity

Seniors Lyman Wible and Mary Boissenett find a quiet refuge at the public library away from the clamorous environment of home.

The increased enrollment made the task of passing from class to class even more difficult as many rushed 'Skins learned.

The increased enrollment of North Side made studying conditions even more crowded than before. The study hall was filled to capacity with chattering students who buckled down to an hour of serious study at the ringing of the bell.

While Redskin Students Viewed These, Other Traditions

Passing years, graduating students and underclassmen all combine to form the North Side traditions.

The initation of underclassmen is one of the oldest and best known of all traditions. Awe-inspired "greenies" spent their first hectic day around the "Dome" bowing to superior upperclassmen and carrying out any other mischievous wishes and commands that they might have.

Senior Redskins will always remember that first proud day when they ascended the ted-carpeted stairs for the initial walk through the Senior Door. Seniors also experienced the thrill and honor of being the first to leave the assemblies and pep sessions.

The traditional spring Recognition Day assembly highlighted the activities of the school year. Following the assembly Seniors, garbed in caps and gowns, went to warch the planting of the ivy in front of the school. "The Hollowed Halls of Ivy" sung by the Triple Trio finished the assembly.

North Side's annual talent show, Varsity Varieties, was a variety show in every aspect. The entertainment varied from the old, dusty melodramas to a "Mad Pad" coffee house, and from a piano duet to a rendition of the brilliant Beatles. Phyllis Driver sang "One Little Candle," accompained by the entire cast in the finale dedicated to our late President, John F. Kennedy.

Junior girls held flowered arehes as graduating seniors entered for the Baccalureate ceremony.

Bowing "greenies" flanked both sides of the red carpet as Seniors ascended the stairs for their first wolk through the senior door.

Honor, Study Go Hand in Hand To Produce Good Pupils

Best Citizens: Randy Harter, Denny Thompson, Steve Beights, Patty Johnstone, Carolyn Doughtv, and Tuzie Roberts.

Many honors are awarded to outstanding Redskins each year. Emphasizing academics, the three-year honor roll includes those seniors who have maintained an A minus or better average for three years at North Side. D.A.R., Best Citizen, and Spirit of North Side are honors awarded to girls excelling in leadership, citizenship, and partitoitsm; while boys with similar high qualities are presented with the Kiwanis Award, D.A.R., and Spirit of North Side.

Recogntion Day honors North Side students who excell in classes or extra-curricular activities and recognizes students for school service, perfect attendance, and outstanding work in planning class social events. Plaques and trophies are offered for outstanding achievement in specialized fields.

While striving to gain this recognition, conscientious Skins spent many evenings and weekends at the public library searching for term paper references, writing special reports, and catching up on daily assignments. Loyal Redskins, who helped teachers and personnel, exerted time and energy sorting books in the school library, taking attendance in study hall, and running errands for the office. While planning and preparing class events, energetic students had the opportunity to work with their classmates in an informal atmosphere.

The theme song "Hey Look Him Over" echoed throughout the gymnasium as North Side students welcomed Indiana's Senator Birch Bayh.

Fun-loving Redskins Took Part in Outdoor Activities

While attempting to conquer snow skiing, Mr. Ronald Certain discovered that the sport had it ups and downs.

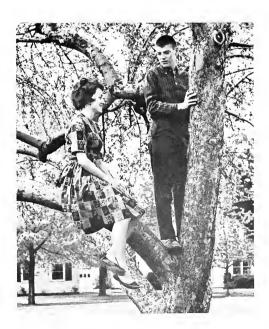

Students always enjoy having a good time, and this year was no exception. Each season, month, week, and day had its fun and memorable moments.

Many students spent the summer months skiing at resorts, visiting relatives, watching city baseball games, going to the dances sponsored by local parks, or just "buzzing" local drive-ins to meet fellow classmates and a few new acquaintances.

Autumn brought a wave of outdoor activities on which students employed much of their energy. An exciting football game and fast-moving dance frequently started off the much-too-short weekends. Weiner roasts, parties, and moonlit hayrides also kept active students occupied. Nature-loving students strolled through the parks enerossed in the beauties of Indian Summer, while the more adventurous and daring fun-seekers attempted a brisk ride on horse-back over the countryside.

Activities of vibrant Redskins changed with the coming of winter. During these months warmly-clad students engaged in such activities as ice skating, snowball battles, building snowmen, and tobboganing. Many 'Skins also ventured to Tamarack Mountain to try their ability at the popular sport of snow skiing.

Despite chilly showers and mud, spring was a favorite time of the year for many. Planning the junior and senior proms, the sophomore party, and cheering the track team highlighted the springtime activities. Basketball sectionals raised the spirits of all the sports-minded students. Later in the spring came graduation for the seniors and the wonderful thoughts of summer for all students and teachers.

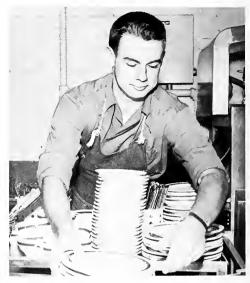

Many high spirited notions prevailed with the coming of spring as exhibited by Pam Lorman and Ted Bonar.

Civic-minded Redskins Gave Service To Local Hospitals,

Redskin students were extremely fortunate because Fort Wayne offered them so many opportunities to help others in their community. Several students spent their spare time working in local hospitals as nursettes. Still other 'Skins spent a night or two a week working with younger children helping them grow to be good citizens of the city.

The students were also a great help in doing a variety of jobs around the school. Student service workers aided the office personnel in the guidance center, attendance center, study hall, and the main office. The main task of the students who helped in the guidance center was to write down the names of those students who reported to the center because they did not feel well. Attendance center helpers kept the attendance record of each student in order. The boys who worked in the center went to each room to pick up the pink absence slips and took them back to the attendance center where the absences were checked and recorded. The students who worked in the study hall checked the attendance, wrote out absence slips, and ran errands. 'Skins who helped in the main office ran errands, filed student records, and delivered the daily mail and papers to the teachers' lounges. Students also helped in the audio-visual aid department. The main job of the AV workers was to show movies to the classes. These movies were shown in either room 11111/2, the AV room, or in the auditorium.

Students never felt unneeded because the opportunity to help was always at hand.

Helping to get the dishes ready for the dishwasher was one of the tasks for Senior Richard Kurtz as a cafeteria worker.

Students inspired by the spirit of giving filled Christmas Bureau boxes to the brim to help needy families of the city.

Journalism students Sue Scheele and Peg Yoder had the opportunity to display their decorating talents while painting the dark room.

Academic

Attempting to maintain the standards of academic excellence that had been the policy of North Side High School in the past became increasingly more difficult in 1964. The bewildering phrases of modern education were hurled at students at an increasingly faster and more concentrated rate. Terms like proportionality constant, stream of consciousness, standard deviation from the mean, and existentialism were quickly absorbed and utilized. In order for the average student to retain the more technical and complicated material, it was necessary for him to spend longer and more concentrated hours doing what was commonly called homework.

Education was not entirely abstract. As more and more employers required a high school education as a prerequisite for employment, up-to-date knowledge of the fields of business and mechanics increased in importance to those who wished to be employed immediately after their high school education was finished.

No matter what area of education was involved, learning the basic required material plus acquiring a certain amount of competence in the subject took more time, effort, and concentration than ever before.

From Revised Themes to "Et Tu, Brute" Pupils Accepted

Clutching his pencil, Mike Boles tests his reading ability against his comprehension.

American literature, emphasized in the sophomore year, oftered pupils an understanding of American authors and their works. Juniors studied English literature and grammar. Senior English included study of comparative literature and different types of literary material with special emphasis on composition and grammar review. In all three years of English, students practiced spelling, composing themes, and perfecting their grammar.

Through use of record players, English reachers introduced more material; for example, readings of Shakespeare's "Macbeth" and "Julius Caesar" and poems of Edgar Allen Poe. The opaque projector, an enlarging device for projecting written materials on a screen, demonstrated English composition.

Several new texts and plays were added to the English curriculum. "Comparative Classics," contrasting "Julius Caesar" with "Elizabeth the Queen," and "Macbeth" with "Emperor Jones," gave students a new method of studying these plays. In the first semester, seniors read from "Comparative Essays," and in the second semester, they studied the plays "Hamlet" and "Oedipus Rex."

English classes were not limited to just reading and writing. Students acted in plays, delivered floor talks, participated in panel discussions, and memorized poetry.

English courses at North Side are designed to create more interest in good literature, and through the study of grammar, promote better stlf-expression.

The French Revolution, ancient civilizations, and the Renaissance period were discussed in World History, one of seven social study courses offered at North Side. By studying United States History, students became familiar with their American heritage and their country's role in a changing world. Economics, the science dealing with the conditions and laws affecting the consumption of wealth, and Government, the study of how American people govern themselves in a democracy, was also part of the social science curriculum.

Maps, charts, films, and guest speakers supplemented elective courses such as citizenship, geography and world affairs, and sociology. Teachers also used current event articles from newspapers and magazines.

The social studies department sponsored several trips during the year. In the fall sophomores ventured on an educational sight-seeing tour of Chicago. The major excursion, however, was the annual junior trip to Washington, D.C. and New York City during spring vacation. The department also sent representatives to conferences and assemblies, such as the Purdue Legislative Assembly.

By acquainting students with their nation and its background, social science classes helped strengthen each student's citizenship.

Rome and her cirizens were brought to life through the study of Latin. First year Latin set the stage with vocabulary and grammar, while second year studies included selective reading from "Caesar's Commentaries on the Gallic War." Third and fourth year pupils translated Cicero's letters, speeches, and views, and Virgil's epic poem, the "Aeneid."

In addition to the classical language of Latin, the department offered two modern languages, French and Spanish. French students memorized phrases, vocabulary, and essential grammar. Employing the information learned in French I and II, students read plays, novels, short stories, and newspapers in advanced French.

Colorful customs of Spain were explored by North Side Spanish pulsi. Oral work was emphasized all four years. Vocabulary and sentence structure, student's tools in any language, were stressed in the first two years. Third year Spanish students utilized conversational texts and Spanish-printed publications, while the fourth year pupils made extensive use of idioms of the language and studied contemporary Latin American literature.

Scientists, Mathematicians Probed, Pried for Solutions

Science courses, biology, botany, zoology, chemistry, physics, and earth science, were varied to offer something of interest to every student. All courses were taught with the idea of diligent practice and repeated experimentation and incorporated bookwork. The bookwork and laboratories respectively.

Rooms 230 and 232, old history classrooms, were transformed into one large classroom with lab facilities. This new lab aided greatly by providing additional space.

New equipment, mineral testing equipment and ripple tanks for wave study assisted teachers in chemistry, physics, and earth science classes, while a new polaroid camera aided all science classes. It continually snapped pictures which were saved and studied at a later date. The camera was used for checking equipment at the year's close.

Insect collections, radiation experiments, and class demonstrations were special projects by students. These projects were completed over a period of time, such as the insect collections extended from the beginning of one semester to the conclusion of that same semester. Occupying a great deal of time and requiring a lot of studious work, the projects deepened and widened a student's knowledge in a particular phase of the subject. In many instances these extra projects helped a student decide if science was the chosen profession for him.

Salesmanship, a new course in North Side's business curriculum, attracted many students during the 1963-64 school year. The course dealt with the development of the ability to sell not only one's product but also one's commodity and service. The purpose of the course was to teach poise, self-confidence, and correct procedure.

Also taught were the business courses ranging from clerical practice to business arithmetic. These courses developed office and secretarial skills needed by the business majors in their later professions.

In the clerical practice classes a new transcribing machine aided in filling our reacher's orders for mimeograph copies of tests and information sheets. The instrument was very helpful in teaching the students correct procedure in an office.

Mr. Robert Traster headed the business department this year, and he was often seen scurrying about in his efforts to keep the department operating efficiently.

Johnny's Becomes Art Annex; Artists, McClead Move In

Although this clay resembles mud pies, it is a future piece of pottery. Artistic fingers will have nothing but the best in clay, potters' wheels, and water.

Johnny's will never be the same. Gone is our neighboring confectionery, gone is our gum supply, and our hamburger "joint." Now our supplier, our old Casba, is the new Art Annex. New art desks and other basic materials have been added to provide an exclusive art room for Mr. Donald McClead. With this second art room, Mr. McClead and Miss Marjorie Bell offered eight art courses, including drawing, crafts, and ceramics as well.

In the basic courses, Arts I and II, the studies of textiles, sketching, and designing were briefly attempted, while the other courses dealt with the more limited topics.

Craft students, experimenting in such material as leather and enamel, created many original and unique articles. The huge new kiln permitted ceramics and pottery to be studied much more extensively and thoroughly, while the foot-treadle sewing machine, which arrived piece by piece, provided equipment for persons engaging in textile handiwork.

Upon completion of Art IV, lettering and poster painting, students took life drawing, a course involving the sketching of detailed portraits, and from there found it possible to go on to a more extensive study in the form of advanced crafts.

In the craft classes, Art VI, pupils learned to make, among other things, rings from strips of silver. After sketching a design which was approved by Miss Bell, the artist filed, cut, shaped, and filed again the silver intended for a ring. When all of this was done, the jewelry was buffed to a high gloss, and an intricate ring resulted.

The more advanced courses, Arts VII and VIII, included graphics, an advanced form of etching, and an advanced art appreciation course.

In a new atmosphere and a transformed building, artists strive to recreate still life, while cars buzz by in the street behind.

Population Explosion Beneficial to Music Departments

Musicians rush to put their instruments away at the end of the period as they conclude Varsity Band practice for the day.

No troubles with Steve Clark, or the concert band's clarinet section. Why? The shadow of "the master" maintains order.

Members of the Boys' Choir work their way through a difficult passage in a new selection.

This year neatly one-fourth of the Dome's entire enrollment participated in one or more of the school's ten musical organizations. Miss Jeanette Rich, the instructor of vocal music, and Mt. C. William Hatt, the instrumental music instructor, made the department's faciliries bulge to accommodate the increased number of musicians.

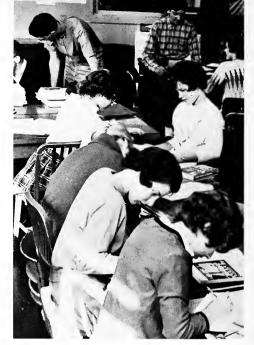

For the first time, the Concert and Varsity Bands combined to form Indiana's largest high school band and to take the Northeastern Indiana Marching Contest, by winning Sweepstakes for the fifth consecutive year. After the band's retreat to the indoors, both the Concert Band and the Orchestra captured the coveted First Chair of America Award for excellence in the field of music.

Vocalizers, numbering 321, joined seven vocal organizations originating from the Girls' and Boys' Choirs and advancing to the Varsity Choir and the Chicas Cantantes. After passing a rigid vocal and theory examination, vocalists qualified for the A Cappella, and its inner groups, the Chansonettes and the Triple Trio.

These musical combinations required their students to spend long hours learning the many types of theory, technique, articulation and enunciation, poise, and showmanship but they got results, as shown by repeated requests for their musical abilities and services, not only at school and during assemblies, but at civic affairs and at churches, where their extended background of religious music was exemplified.

Journalists who hope to extend their knowledge of style in writing check texts to learn the correct way.

Thespians', Journalists'

To develop a "news-knowing-nose" and to stress the "ifs, ands, and buts" of an eyecatching story are aims in first year journalism. Both the "nose" and the knowledge concerning the "ifs, ands, and buts" are developed through the reading, studying, meticulous evaluation and group discussions of stories, leads, and headlines, written by professional journalists. After studying several types of stories, the student is ready to compare his work to the professional's and evaluate his work correctly.

In this way he learns what events are news, thus developing the "nose," and the proper story form for these ideas, thus employing his knowledge of the "ifs, ands, and buts."

Individual apprenticeship in a special skill demanded for a specific publications position is acquired in second year journalism. First, second, and third year students help in the publishing of the school newspaper, the "Northerner." Usually the first year students write stories to develop skills. The second year journalism students hold responsible positions on the staft, and the third year students hold responsible positions also, but they also instruct the underclassmen in correct journalism skills and practices.

Most of these gestures are not shrugs of ignorance. Mr. Stanley Lee is demonstrating to his beginning speech class the basic gestures used in public speaking.

Development Became Stepping Stone for Later Years

Kaye Roy applies the finishing make-up touches to thespian Gary Wring, transforming him into an aged man.

Students taking speech and drama developed the skills of self-expression when reciting lines on the stage, or when delivering a self-composed address to their fellow classmares. These pupils, under the direction of Mr. Stanley Lee, and a new teacher. Mr. John DeYoung, learned the art of expressing themselves fearlessly and clearly to their critical audience.

After first studying the fundamentals of good public speaking, students taking Speech I and II composed and delivered many short speeches designed to leave different impressions upon their listeners. The elements of correct parliamentary procedure as well as the advantageous use of the microphone were studied and practiced. Basic gestures were taught in these speech classes to provide confidence and poise to future public speakers, when confronting any audience.

Drama, the other side of debate and formal public speaking, has never been all the glamour, cosmetic grease paint and applause one thinks of today. The course itself was an inclusive study of theater history and of writers' interpretations or styles of drama, while the stagecraft classes, also directed by Mr. James Purkhiser, developed techniques used behind the scenes. Stagecraft novices learned to create costumes, to assemble props, and to construct and light sets effectively. These detailed chores, necessary for a successful stage production, were learned and put to the test at our school sponsored plays.

Threading a needle, boiling water, or more advanced things such as nursing a cold at home or learning to understand personal and family problems, were included in the curriculum of the Home Economics Department. Because they were intended to provide interesting and worthwhile training in all areas of homemaking, courses were planned in chronological order.

The clothing sections provided a working knowledge of fabrics and their care, and with a second semester, seamstresses developed skills in constructing clothing as well as solving problems of selecting a wardrobe. With only a little wear and tear on sewing machines and nerves, articles of apparel ranging from aprons to dresses gradually were converted from patterns and pieces of cloth by their creators.

In the cooking courses girls learned food selection and preparation, with the understanding that each girls had to taste every dish she concocted. Physical and financial aspects of home management were also studied.

Advanced classes consisting of girls and a few boys discussed the problems of dating, courtship, marriage, and family life, and outside speakers were occasionally invited to add their points of view.

Blocks for Track Boys, Develop Home-Useable Methods

One of the special projects that a metals' student might have made upon the completion of the required project, a gavel, was either a paperweight, a machine bolt, or a cold chisel.

Mid-year rotation of classes and new equipment provided ample opportunity for students to gain experience in two or more areas of vocational training ranging from freehand sketching to welding. Some students carried one or more hours a day of some type of vocational training. In these special classes a project was tried for the first time. This special project consisted of the construction of chutes for the cross-country team. An assembly line was formed in each class and each class constructed some part of the chutes. With all the classes working together the chutes were completed by the time of the Sectional cross-country meet. This highlight of the year, the making of the chutes, gave the boys experience in actually producing an article on the assembly line and adjusting the assembly line procedure to the idiosyncracies of the article.

Faculty

A teacher is many things. He is a device which teaches and explains a subject, gives tests, figures averages, and issues grades. He is an educated human being that smiles, chats, advises, understands, promotes school spirit, tells jokes and even laughs at yours. Most important—a teacher is a friend!

A teacher's work is never finished; he works seven hours a day at school and grades da'ily work and tests in the evenings. Although he knows his subject thoroughly, he is willing to accept new thoughts and ideas. His fundamental goal is to teach the subject matter in a way that his slowest pupils can understand, and his "Einsteins" are not bored. His wish is that each of his students remembers and uses what he has taught him. Teachers find that each class has its own personality and thus must be handled differently.

In addition to the minimum job of teaching, a teacher spends much of his spare time sponsoring school events or clubs. He acts as a counselor to students who seek his help and understanding, and often guides them to a career for which they are best suited.

Sometimes a teacher wonders whatever made him choose the teaching profession. All his doubts vanish, however, when one of his former problem children returns to the Dome ten years after graduating and declares through a broad smile, "Thank you, Mr. Smith, for your help at North. You'll never guess the great job offer I accepted after I got my college degree!" The rest isn't important. The glowing heart is already shining through.

Dr. Bill C. Anthis Gains Experience In His Initial Year As

Having taken over the job of principal, Dr. Bill C. Anthis discovers the finer points of his position early in the year.

.By the end of his first year as principal, Dr. Bill C. Anthis demonstrated to the student body his capabilities both as a leader and as a counselor.

Already familiar with the curriculum at North Side, he introduced changes in the program which eased the problems of crowded classrooms. He was responsible for the use of the punch card system, begun in 1963, which he jokingly calls a "poor man's IBM." It eliminated many schedule conflicts and program changes in the fall, and it gave the students a chance to select their own schedules.

Dr. Anthis had an "open door" policy with all students, inviting them to discuss their problems with him or just to chat about school affairs. By talking with all English classes and all school and class leaders, he managed to come in contact with almost everyone, asking for opinions on the school policies.

He did not spend all his time at North Side because his family was of foremost importance to him. He relaxed during the hours passed at home with his wife and seven-year-old son. "Spare time" was spent playing bridge or ping-pong.

Aside from participating in school business, Dr. Anthis was a welcome and familiar figure at all social functions. North Side was an integral part of his life and directing its activities was a great responsibility.

PTA, Lester Grile Strive Toward Better School Relations

Superintendent of FWCS, Lester Grile, pauses to catch up on some back residing.

Genuine understanding was the goal of the Parent Teachers Association this year as they strived for harmony among the youth, their parents, and their teachers. Back-to-school visitation night, student and adult panel discussions, pot luck suppers, and speeches delivered by authorities were used to develop the theme, "Understanding Your School," at regular and study group meetings. A special senior mother's tea with a water show given by the Ripplettes highlighted the spring activities. Special projects for the year included two aftergame dances, ushering at the reading workshop, donating flowers for the senior baccalaureare service, and donating funds for the PTA scholarship. In addition to the officers the PTA had many active chairmen to insure efficiency.

Mr. Lester Grile, in his third year as superintendent of the Fort Wayne Community Schools, worked industriously to solve the problems of a growing community. The increased population has necessitated the construction of numerous schools at all levels, therefore placing additional burdens on him. However, one of the most important jobs for Mr. Grile is coordinating the activities of all the different schools in Fort Wayne.

PTA officers: Mrs. John Chapman, second vice-president; Mr. John Morris, president; Mrs. Otto Eichel, treasorer; Mrs. William Ganter, secretary. Mrs. Sam Johnston, vice-president, was absent.

"A sound hand, an honest heart, and an humble spirit are the three best guides through time and to eternity." (anonymous) Mrs. Victoria G. Young, Mr. Charles Hinton and Mr. Max Updike are North Side's three best guides to a useful education and to future success.

As dean of girls, Mrs. Young's duties are infinite in number and value. She advises students on college choices, scholarship possibilities, and student-aid programs. She also has the responsibility of organizing the homeroon schedule, and keeping an up-to-date school calendar of events for clubs, assemblies, and special programs.

Mr. Charles Hinton, during his first year as dean of boys, has one of the busiest offices in the building. He is responsible for counseling all students who need discipline. As a friend to all, he does his best to direct students in the right direction. Mid-year program changes are an added responsibility for Mr. Hinton.

In his initial year as guidance coordinator, Mr. Max Updike functions as an organizer of all the guidance departments including the counselors, vocational directors, and deans. All school assemblies, and program changes are also on his list of many responsibilities.

Molding 2,500 distinctly different personalities into a unified student body was not easy, but the task was accomplished. The most apparent cohesive bond was the common experience of going to school at the same place and at the same time. Unusual events, like the appearances of Senator Birch Bayh and Representative E. Ross Adair; exciting events, like winning the city football championship and fighting our way into the final game of the sectional basketball tournament; and common events like listing the daily bulletin each morning and fighting the crush in the halls made each day spent at North Side worthwhile and interesting.

Common memories and experiences welded the senior, junior, and sophomore classes of 1964 into one inseparable group. We shared the inconveniences of waiting in cafeteria lines, jostling each other in the jam-packed halls, and having homerooms in every place from the gym to the library. But the petty inconveniences, which deepened our mutual bond of memory, were far outweighed by the advantages which we had. We laughed, complained, enjoyed ourselves, thought, and learned together as a unified student body in 1964.

Because of the high academic standard that was attained by the class of 1964, the valedictorian, John Hall, and the salutatorian, Martha Fenstel, were joined by three other people, Ron Gamble, Ralph Hassig, and Rebecca Hinton, who had maintained a three year average of 95 or better. This exclusive group of five was designated the high bonors group. More emphasis was placed on the valedictorian and salutatorian individually because of the closeness of their three year averages. Often less than a tenth of a point has been the difference between the averages of the top few people in the class.

The exclusive high honors group was joined by a much larger segment of the class of 1964 who had maintained an average of ninety or higher during their three years at North Side. The three year honor roll constituted approximately ten per cent of the class of 1964. Both the members of the high honors group and the three year honor roll were rewarded for the persistence and good study habits which they exhibited in high school in order to achieve academic excellence by recognition from their fellow classmates.

Lynne Schuhert and Tuzic Roberts provide the glamour as class president Randy Harter forms the line of the other officers composed of Denny Thompson, Phil Ainslie, Lee Richardson, and Tom Jamison.

With each click of the voting machine, the class of 1964 elected their officers for the final time. The 656 members of the senior class chose Randy Harter, president; Denny Thompson, vice-president; Lynne Schubert, secretary-treasurer; and Tuzie Roberts, chairman of the social council. The social council, composed of Lee Richardson, Phil Ainslie, and Tom Jamison, with the class advisers, Mr. Wade Fredrick and Miss Margaret Spiegel, helped the officers plan and organize the all-school play, the banquet, and the prom.

After visiting college campuses, many seniors sent in admission applications and took the required entrance examinations with the hope of being accepted into their chosen college. They achieved balance in their lives by spending many hours at the library and by enjoying the many traditional senior social activities. With the announcement of the valedictorian, salutatorian, and the three year honor roll, the seniors faced the realization that the Senior Door would no longer belong personally to the Class of 1964.

Homework was replaced by caps and gowns during the last few weeks of school as the class made last minute plans for commencement and graduation. Walking under flower-adorned arches too soon became the last step from the sheltered and well guided world of North Side to the world of independence and maturity.

Reverend Olsen Was Principal Speaker at Senior Banquet

Reverend Armin Oldsen challenges the seniors to remember the pleasant and forget the unpleasant memories of the past.

Exchanging comments before the senior banquet are Reverend Armin Oldsen and Mr. By Hey.

The "Lamplight of Memory" led seniors to reflect their years at North Side as they gathered at the Scottish Rite for the first of their traditional seniors activities. Class speakers recalled specific years in their speeches. "We Light the Lamp" was Bobbie Cook's theme as she reminisced by describing the activities of the freshman and sophomore years. Bobbie stated that the Class of 1964 was the first sophomore class called "greenies." Speaking on the junior year, Bonnie Rudensky recollected the confusion of the newly-initiated three shifts and the proud feeling as the track team won the title of State Track Champs. Finally, Lee Richardson summed up the class achievements and expressed the proud feeling of possessing the Senior Door, the city football title, and the largest marching band in Indiana. By Hey responded for the faculty by predicting the future of the class.

The Reverend Armin Oldsen, the principle speaker, suggested that the seniors recall the pleasant and forget the unpleasant memories of the past and start lighting new ones. Denny Thompson and Phil Ainslie gave the invocation and benediction, respectively, and Jim Benninghoff served as toastmaster. The Chansonettes added to the program by singing "Moon River." After singing the school song, the seniors were guests at the after-banquet record hop sponsored by the parents.

Glancing through their programs, a group of seniors entertain themselves while waiting for their food.

Many Outside Activities Spark Final Year as Seniors

The Class of 1964 launched their senior year with the traditional red carpet celebration on the front steps. This was the first of the many activities in which the new seniors would take part. As fall progressed into winter, plans for the senior-sponsored, all-school play, "Little Mary Sunshine," and the senior banquet, "Lamplight of Memory," were formed and presented. Complimenting the regular senior activities were basketball and football games, parties, and dances. The seniors also learned about the American economy, short stories, and physics, among other subjects.

Between social activities, the senior class selected three boys and three girls to receive the "Good Citizen" awards. Randy Harter, Denny Thompson, Steve Beights, Patty Johnstone, Carolyn Doughty, and Tuzie Roberts were the sextet chosen. Nimet Cinsoy, an exchange student from Turkey, shared her country's customs with the seniors to add to their culture. With the arrival of the robins and the spring rains, the class looked forward to the senior prom, Baccalaureate, and, finally, Commencement.

Food and a typewriter seem to be a lady's best friend while Ginger DeVault studies at the last minute for a final.

Meekly balancing themselves on the State Street Bridge, defenseless sophomores Mike Harper and Paul Helmke await further orders from senior Don DeCrance.

"Oh Little Mary, when I return . . ." reassures Jim Benninghoff (Captain Jim) to Phyllis Driver (Little Mary) as he prepares to leave on a dancerous mission in the All-School Play,

"Seniors Say, We Will Win!" was the slogan on the pep sign which was carried before the football stands by artists Mary Sayles, Sue Scheele, Carolyn Doughty, and Pam Lorman.

"Mother told me there would be days like this!" exclaims Bob Tegt-meyer as he speeds towards the icy waters of the St. Joe River,

Whether it's speeding down snow-clad hills in a flying saucer sled or relaxing with a few close friends, the seniors proved that they were never too busy to enjoy themselves.

Huddling under blankets, the class shivered together as it watched North's football team win the city football championship. Later, the seniors proudly took their places down front in the school's auditorium as the Dramatics Department presented the all-school play, "Little Mary Sunshine."

During their last winter at North, many seniors packed their long underwear and snowshoes in their car trunks and headed north to spend an afternoon of robogganing and sking. With the arrival of spring, the class viewed Varsity Varieties and celebrated spring vacation by sleeping later in the mornings and attending parties at night. These were just a few of the many fun-filled moments during the final days of the class' senior year.

Leaving one of several parties early, Norma Earl, Ron Poffenberger, Jane Gerding, and Lee Richardson hurry to the school's auditorium to view "Little Mary Sunshine."

Junior class officers are Dave Switzer, president; Paul Paino, vicepresident; Cindy Pattengale, secretary-treasurer; Prise Houts, social chairman.

Still the largest class ever to enter the Dome, the Class of 1965 began their first year as upperclassmen with the election of officers. Those elected were: Dave Switzer, president; Paul Paino, vice-president; Cindy Pattengale, secretary-treasurer; and Priscilla Houts, chairman of the social council.

Frequent guidance assemblies and programs kept the juniors well-informed. For instance, Dr. George W. Crane, a nationally known psychologist and columnist, spoke on the importance of an education in today's society. Other programs included vocational guidance and class meetings to plan their prom.

Finally, after months of work and preparation, the junior prom, "Fantasia," was held at the Scottish Rite Ballroom on March 21, with Woody Neff and his orchestra providing the music. Afterward, a party was held at Goeglein's Barn. The juniors then ended their year with the traditional walk through the "senior door," proving to themselves that they were actually seniors at last.

Juniors Manage To Stay Busy With Variety of Activities

Like many North Side students Sandy Lowden holds a part-time job after school. Above, she is shown sorting shirts at a local department store.

Just two years ago, we entered North Side as the largest class ever to attend the Dome. Unfamiliar as we were to high school life, we soon overcame our fear and got to work.

Our junior year was filled with many outside activities and we gained more freedom than we had known before, but received added responsibility to go along with it.

Now we look forward to our final year at North Side with the hope it will be as profitable as the last.

Linda Dienell and Lana Armstrong entertain themselves by looking through the Legend and all the signatures that they have gotten.

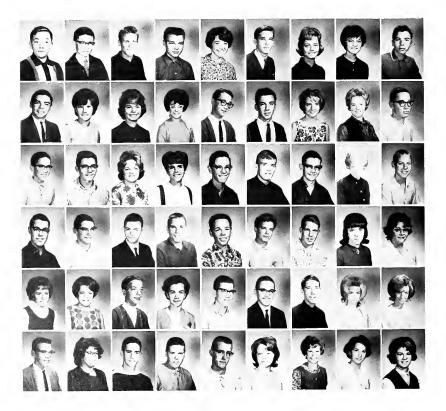

850 Sophs Invaded North's Classrooms, Clubs, Offices

Sophomore class officers: Pete Meister, president; Paul Helmke, vicepresident; Diane Altekruse, secretary-treasurer; and John Neff, social chairman.

Along with new officers and a new administration, 850 new faces were also seen around the Dome. Sophomores entered North expectant of the things to come. Even though the Sophomore class was not able to surpass in numbers the last sophomore class, they proved themselves as worthy in many other ways. Sophomores were aided a great deal by the administration, classroom teachers, homeroom teachers, and their class advisor, Mrs. Dolores Klocke. In February the Sophomores showed their true spirit in the election of their class officers, Pete Meister, Paul Helmke, Diane Altekruse, and John Neff.

On May 2 the Sophomore class concluded their fine year at North with the Sophomore class party.

Sophs discover that the Dome is not all studying

Sophomore students take advantage of the first warm days of spring by spending their lunch hour munching ice cream cones on the lawn.

Sophomores smile for their under class pictures which they hope will be excellent,

Sophomores chat among themselves in the middle of the day while they enjoy their lunch leisurely.

Activities

A club can mean a number of things. Worry, enjoyment, experience, knowledge, and activity could be acquired from each of the thirty active clubs. The organization and efficiency necessary for a club to accomplish all of its accumulative business during a period of one hour per month was mammoth. A series of cabinet meetings and committee meetings usually served as a substitute for a longer meeting time.

Twisting kleenex into roses for dance decorations; wrapping stacks of Christmas packages for needy people; studying modern languages, literature, or science; and playing softball at a club picnic were an integral part of the activities of North Side High School in 1964. By taking proper advantage of the opportunities offered by clubs it was possible to become active and interested in the affairs of the school, to learn more about a given area of study, to gain a working knowledge of parliamentary procedure, to make new friends, and to gain individual recognition for work. Perhaps most important of all, clubs gave us the opportunity to take the responsibility for programs, meetings, and social events with faculty guidance but with no direct help. Each of the thirty clubs at North Side in 1964 taught us to be responsible, creative, and resourceful.

The old and the new were combined to present to the school a different Student Council. The student body voted for officers during the spring. The officers elected were Steve Beights, president; Joe Virgilio, vice-president; Carolyn Doughty, secretary; Liz Bedree, treasurer; Graham Richard, parlimentarian; and Rick Thompson, sergeant-at-arms.

Another custom of the Council is sponsoring the annual Christmas Bureau. This project was directed by Vice-President Joe Virgilio. Each homeroom in the school chose to support a family or bring miscellaneous items for the needy citizens of Fort Wayne. Again this year, Student Council sponsored two war orphans, one from Greece and the other from Viet Nam.

The most outstanding change that took place in the Council was the changing of sponsors. Mr. James R. Lewinski and Miss Ruth Eudaley assisted the officers throughout the year.

Numerous committees were established to improve phases of North Side life. One example was the sportsmanship committee which helped improve school spirit. This committee also organized the original "Red Day." On days of home games, the committee encouraged each student to wear red and white to show that they were supporting the team.

At the beginning of the school year, a representative from each homeroom and each club was elected. Student Council members attended the meetings each Tuesday during the third period. Although club representatives were allowed to participate in debates, only homeroom representatives could vote.

During the summer the officers, with the exception of the parliamentarian and sergeant-at-arms, attended a state workshop at Indiana University for a week. Composing the largest delegation at the workshop, three of the five representatives held offices there.

Principal, Dr. Bill Anthis and Seniors Denny Thompson and Linda Busian stop to talk to about the Student Council drop-out committee.

Editor, Assistants, Photographers, and Reporters

Managing Editor Randy Harter struggles in vain as Editor Mary Sayles traps him into writing an editorial.

Rush! Rush! Rush! Each week brought a new deadline which had to be met. Time wouldn't wait for the "Northerner reporters to track down sources, ger the facts, and write interesting and correct stories. Yet, despite the often frenzied rush, hundreds of subscribers always received North Side's student publication on time.

The finished newspaper resulted from a week-long cycle of events. Trying to cover all phases of school life, the news, feature, and sports editors assigned stories to their staffs, composed mainly of faculty adviser Miss Norma Thiele's journalism students. Before appearing in the "Northerner," every story had to be proofread, checked for accuracy, and sometimes rewritten. Editors assigned headlines to each story, and, after the stories had been "set" at the press, pasted them on a layout. During the first semester, Mary Sayles served as editor-in-chie'. The second semester saw Mary as student adviser, and an editorial board made up of Pam Lorman, editor-in-chief, Susie Lotter, and Randy Harter.

Of course, all was not work. A Christmas potluck, publications banquet, and spring picnic provided merriment for the Redskin reporters.

Susie Lotter and Pam Lorman examine a past issue of the Northerner as Bob Johnston prepares a new issue.

Karen Antrim, Business Munager, pauses momentarily as John Howe snaps her picture for the Legend.

Several Northerner staff members gather in Room 113 for an informat meeting as Editor Mary Sayles presides and Miss Norma Thiele advises.

A look of anticipation comes over the face of Jane Gerding as she dials the phone to hopefully obtain an ad for her section of the Northerner.

Filing away the Legend payment blanks is only one of the many jobs of Assistant Business Manager, Sandy Sheehan.

Margaret Snyder finds Bob Tegtmeyer in a "not-so-joking" mood as she playfully pastes a picture on his forehead.

Kay Nemeyer marks pictures for her section of the Legend as Lynne Schubert dictates cutlines to typist Linda Busian.

Race With Time To Complete Production of '64 Legend

Miss Norma Thiele lends a helping hand to the sports staff consisting of Denny Thompson, Lee Richardson, and Mike Sweeny.

To most the "Legend" is a memory book long awaited, fun to look at; but to a selected few the "Legend" is something more. To the "Legend" staff it is the final product of long hours of hard work, the appeasement of many rewrites and the hectic days-before-deadlines spent trying to complete work long put off.

Work on this year's book began last spring with the appointment of the staff. For the editor, Bonnie Rudensky, and Mary Anglin, her assistant, the job began with the task of placing the staff. With the assistance of Miss Norma Thiele, section editor positions were given to Linda Busian, opening; Lynne Schubert, faculty; Kay Nemeyer, cacademic; Carolyn Doughty, senior; Bob Tegtmeyer, junior; Margaret Snyder, sophomore; Sue Scheele, activities; and Denny Thompson, sports. Patty Johnstone was made copy editor, Tuzie Roberts, index, and Liz Bedree, business manager. Other members of the staff were interested seniors and juniors.

After being chosen, all staff members went to a journalism conference on the campus of Ball State Teachers College in Muncie, Indiana, where they attended workshops covering all phases of year-book work. Also, during that time, pictures of spring activities were taken. Summer tound the members of the advertising staff hard at work attempting to sell pictorial ads to Fort Wayne businesses.

From the first day of school on, the staff worked to complete the "Legend" before the deadline. Many staff members spent nights after school working to finish their sections. However, the "Legend" staff did more than just work. Staff members combined with members of the other publications and participated in many activities. One of the most unusual of these was the repainting of room 113. The bulletin boards, book shelves, and the dark toom acquired a new look after journalists spent a morning painting. Two other activities that "Legend" workers took part in were the annual Christmas party and the publications banquer.

Membership in Quill and Scroll was the highest honor North had to confer on the senior members of the publications staffs. To be accepted in this national honorary society seniors must not only excel in journalism but also be in the upper third of their class. Then, a sample of their work must be approved by school and national advisors. Miss Norma Thiele, publications director, announced new members and awarded gold membership pins at the publications banquet.

The hope of being accepted into the honorary 1500 Club spurred on each member of the Northerner staff. The only membership requirement for the club was 1500 points. Miss Norma Thiele recognized five journalists with the bronze pins signifying membership. Seven students who earned more than 1500 points received higher awards which included silver, gold, or jeweled pins, and a journalism letter.

Dance Club Produces Show; GAA Perfects Sports Skills

Although new this year, the Modern Dance Club improved the dance skills of its members and produced a show in the process. The girls practiced every Tuesday and Thursday under the guidance of Miss Janice Michiels, founder and sponsor of the organization. The dancers learned basic dance prinicples ranging from jumps to turns.

During the months of November, December, and January they put together their first major dance routine, using a part of "The Nutcracker Suite," which they presented at a convention for physical education teachers in February. This endeavor taught them the basics of lighting, costuming, choreography, and dance techniques.

Arrows struck their targets occasionally as forty members of the Girls' Athletic Association perfected their archery skills in preparation for a tournament. Assistance came from Miss Ruth Carroll, sponsor, and Mr. Joe Dean, a representative from a local sporting goods company, who demonstrated correct methods and proper equipment. Mr. Dean showed club members the results of incorrect methods and how to correct bad habits.

When not busy with archery, GAA members played baskerball, volleyball, badminton, and ping pong. To obtain proficiency in these and other sports, the girls practiced during the eighth period.

Purchasing flags, learning about foreign nations, and having fun highlighted the school year's activities of the Globe Trotters.

Being the largest single club at the Dome, Globe Trotters greatly enhanced the knowledge of many Redskins concerning countries that often appear in the world news. Pictures of dark jungles, government terrorists, and weird, ancient voodoo rites crept into individual minds as South Side's Pat Weiger told of his native Haiti and its government under Dictator Duvalier. On a lighter note, Redskin Linda Furste related her experiences on a summer vacation in the land of the Beatles and Shakespeare, Great Britain. At another meeting seniors wrote and acted a comedy play.

As a school service, Globe Trotters bought new 30-star United States flags for display in the social studies rooms. In this effort to provide school-wide partiorism, the history-geography club used funds from its annual first-of-the-season football dance, entitled "Rugby Romp."

Sponsored by Mrs. Jacqueline Mefford and Mr. Harold Young, Globe Trotters voted Seniors Dave Stubbins president the first semester and Jim Golm the second. A large springtime picnic ended Globe Trotters' 1963-64 season.

Helicon Members Sponsor Lincoln-Washington Assembly

Throughout the 1963-64 school year, Helicon, the honorary English club of North Side, sponsored many activities. The October meeting was held in the form of a potluck supper and in November club members sponsored an after-game dance. At Christmas time the members brought candies and cookies for elderly residents of the Allen County Home. Jon Gresley, who dressed as Santa Claus, cheered everyone by shaking hands and wishing them Christmas greetings. In February they gave the Lincoln-Washington Assembly, having Dr. Louis Warren as the main speaker. In the spring they sponsored a tea and juniors presented a Senior Farewell Banquet.

Sponsors of Helicon, Miss Mabel Greenwalt, Mrs. Marjorie Spoolstra, and Mr. Robert Pugh, stated the purpose of the club as "to promote an interest in literature and stimulate discussion of literaty topics." Prospective members of the club must have at least a B plus average in English.

Junior Classical League, the Latin Club at North, was open to all students enrolled in second year Latin. JCL attempted to encourage an interest and appreciation in the civilization, language, literature, and art of ancient Greece and Rome among young people.

ICL had an approximate membership of 95 students this year, with Miss Judith Bowen and Mrs. Janet Weber serving as sponsors. Throughout the school year the club sponsored many activities. At Christmas they joined with Modern Language Club to sponsor a party for both club's members. JCL and MLC also combined for the spring picnic and for the dance they sponsored on December 20. A few of the members also attended the state convention on April 18 at Ball State.

Each year the state JCL presents a scholarship to a person who is interested in being a Latin teacher. North's JCL supports this fund, and the receiver gets about $200.

Students who this year were taking either French or Spanish had the opportunity of joining the Modern Lauguage Club, or MLC. The club met every second Tuesday of the month, having as its sponsors Miss Frances Plumanns and Mr. Paul Lemke.

Among the club's activities during the school year was a Christmas party, at which they sang Christmas songs in different languages and saw a movie of how the Christmas story was created. On December 20 the MLC club, along with JCL, sponsored the after-game dance, "Misletoe Mash," and towards the end of the year they sponsored a spring picnic.

Approximately sixty persons were members of the club. Requirement for membership is that a person must be in a modern language class or have completed two years of the language successfully.

Speech Makers Travel Far to Enter Contests, Debates

Mr. John De Young, one of North Side's new faculty members, replaced Mr. Stanley Lee as sponsor of the Speech Club. Mr. De Young, who holds a degree in education, was previously employed as a disc jockey by a Fort Wayne radio station. In addition to Speech Club, Mr. De Young taught several classes.

The club's only purpose is to promote and advance students in all phases of public speaking and communicating by voice and gesture. To attain its goal, the Speech Club traveled by bus to participate in state and national contests. It also entered local contests.

After joining the National Forensic League, an honorary group of high school speech students, the members accumulated points for each speech given in a contest. After earning 250 points, the students reached the National Forensic's top level of achievement.

Besides presenting readings and interpretations, new members memorized and presented poetry. The more experienced speakrs gave extemporaneous speeches and original oratories.

The debate team was composed of nine speech club members. The varsity and sub-varsity squads each contained four members, and one speaker substituted for any sub-varsity team member who was absent. By winning several contests, members of the varsity squad have won personal and team honors. Not to be outdone, the sub-varsity debaters have worked hard to gain many honors both for themselves and for North Side.

During the football season, the Speech Club members took time off to sponsor an after-game dance which was entitled "Frigid Frolics."

At an informal meeting, NFL members laugh at one of club president Mike Harper's jokes as Mr. Lee slyly looks at him from the background.

National Thespians is the honorary club for people who, during the school year, take part and excell in dramatics. Directed by Mr. James Purkhiser, Thespians, a condensed name for the organization, has no regular meeting time.

It is not necessary for a student to be taking a dramatics class before being considered a possible member for the honorary club. He may be working backstage adjusting the curtains, lights, or sound effects. He may be a costume seamstress, or he may be the onstage performer. The only requirement is that he be connected with dramatics, either directly or indirectly.

Throughout the school year dramatics classes presented the Senior Play, "Little Mary Sunshine," and the annual Varsity Varieties with the rheme of "North Hollywood Palace." Each had a large cast, and drew many spectators.

To promote appreciation of good music, the members of Modern Music Masters and their spikes met the fourth Friday of each month to share their common musical interests. The honorary organization's new members, spikes, were chosen twice a year on the criterion of their ability as shown in band or orchestra. To show their musical interests and talents, the Tri-M spikes played solos, wrote term papers on famous composers, performed in initiation skirs, and rook part in other activities.

At the annual Christmas party, Tri-M members and spikes entertained and amused the Dome's instrumentalists. In January the club sponsored a dance, "The Bunny Hop." As a final activity of the year, members treated themselves to a summer swimming party.

Members of Daffi Dabblers gather 'round the Dome to prepare Christmas lights to decorate the school for the holidays.

Daffi Dabblers provided the opportunity for North Side Redskins who were interested in art to enjoy doing something useful with their artistic abilities. At holiday time the club members, under the sponsorship of Miss Marjorie Bell and Mr. Donald McClead, were especially busy making decorations. The Dabblers soaped and painted windows with favorite Christmas scenes in the children's ward of Parkview Hospital. Phrases under the scenes identified them as a part of the 'Night Before Christmas' theme.

The club used colored lights, pine boughs, and fiery red poinserias to decorate North Side's halls and main offices. After decorating the Dome the members of Daffi Dabblers are a potluck supper in the Art Annex.

Also at Christmas time the art club sponsored an art sale to display the talents of its members and earned money for the club's treasury. In May a sidewalk sale was held in which participating members hung paintings on the walls and displayed pottery and jewelry on tables.

In January Daffi Dabblers sponsored their annual money-making dance. This year "Art Throb" was selected as its title. To emphasize the arristic theme, a huge palette was used as decoration.

A sketch party held on North's lawn and the river bank permitted the members to draw still life with charcoal. To view the art museum and a stage-production, Daffi Dabblers also made their annual trip to Chicago with the National Thespians, an honorary group of dramatics students.

"Learning Today.—Teaching Tomorrow," the theme for the Norgro Future Teachers of America Club, aprly expressed its goals. The club strived to cultivate in its members the qualities of personality, character, and leadership which are essential in good teachers. Also, members learned about the teaching profession, its opportunities, and its responsibilities. "Teachers are Human," a panel discussion, and the film "A Desk for Billie" composed two of the meetings which enabled members to study the teaching profession.

In addition to these activities, the club sponsored a dance, a Mothers' Tea, and a party in January. At the beginning of each semester, new officers were installed in a solemn candle lighting ceremony.

The enjoyment and understanding of mathematics is the object of North Side's Math Club. Experience with the two computers, which the club purchased last year, complemented the club's studies. To learn how the machines worked, each member pushed buttons and inserted wires into Minivac 601 and the digital computer.

All students enrolled in advanced mathematics courses were eligible for membership. During the year each club member was required to present an interesting program dealing with some phase of mathematics. In addition to regular club meetings the Math Club traveled to Chicago and sponsored an after-game dance.

Mr. Jerald Miller began the math club. It was accepted for membership in Mu Alpha Theta, a national organization of high school math clubs.

Ripplettes gave girls with ourstanding aquatic ability the opportunity to perfect their skills in water ballet and synchronized swimming. The girls demonstrate their aquatic talents every other year in a water show given at North Side High School. This year a water show was performed with the theme "Another Opening, Another Show." Toward the end of this year the girls held their annual banquet.

In preparation for the water show, Miss Janice Michiels, the sponsor for the organization, instructed the girls in their swimming during practice sessions after school hours every Monday and Wednesday. There, they spent their time synchronizing their swimning strokes to the strains of such familiar musical scores as "West Side Story," "Camelot," and the "Nuteracker Suite" while they worked on such skills as the front crawl, breast stroke, hairpin dive, porpoise, and the pike surface dive.

This year four boys were added to the roster of outstanding swimmers participating in the water show. They were Mike Buckner, John Kent, Bob Scott, and Denny Thompson. The boys were immediately tagged with the nickname of "Ripples." Eleven new female members were also selected and initiated into the swimming club. Following tryouts, the new members went through a "spike" period for three weeks. Duties include wearing a sign stating "I am a new Ripplette," addressing their superiors as "Most honorable active Miss Ripplette," performing various tasks for the glory of the club, and presenting a short skit.

Practicing for their water show, a few Ripplette members form half of a five-point star,

A new meeting time has this year sprouted from Key Club, the only all boys organization at North. To give more persons a chance to belong, a sixth period club was added to the fourth, and fifth period time; the split lunch period made it possible for all boys to meet only two lunch periods a week. Membership of these three periods totaled approximately fifty, while sixth period, being the newest, had the least number of members.

Mr. Glen Bickel, sponsor of the fifth period Key Club, pointed out that one main requirement for acceptance into the club is that the boys "must be willing to serve their school and community."

Mr. Clive Wert and Mr. Ronald Certain, sponsors of the fourth and sixth period clubs, helped the boys with many of their projects.

The club raised approximately $2000 to build tennis courts; produced the annual North Side Key, a school directory of names, addresses, telephone numbers, and homeroom numbers of all students in school; and sponsored a dance.

Each summer an international convention of Key Clubs is held. Last summer, from July 7 to 10, the convention took place in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. The Key Clubs sent, as their representatives to this international convention Jon Gresley, Tom Jamison, Tom Konow, Rick Regedanz, Joe Virgilio, and Doug Montgomery.

In addition to the yearly international convention, there is a state convention. This year it was in Indianapolis during spring vacation.

Sixteen girls this year composed the twirling squad for North Side. They were very active all year around.

During the fall they joined Concert and Varsity Bands to form the Marching Band. Together, these groups showed off their talents at half time by making various formations on the football field to entertain the onlookers.

Throughout the long winter they displayed more of their talents by twirling at half time during home basketball games. Often they had only one or two girls give a special performance.

Although they did not march or twirl during the spring at track meets, they did not remain idle. They participated in many contests. One such contest was the NISBOVA Contest, where they twirled to the band's music. They also took part in many local parades.

Varsity band played "Nativity Overture," "Christmas Parade and March," and "Christopher the Christmas Tree" at the annual Winter concert.

The band also purchased new uniforms and sold gum to pay for them. The outfits were worn at the Northern Indiana Band, Orchestra, and Vocal Association contest. To express its theme, "Panoramic U.S.A.," the band played "Give My Regards to Broadway" while forming a top hat and a cane. Two lamp posts graced the field during "Basin Street." Other old favorites were played as the band formed appropriate designs. The result of its performance was the presentation of the Sweepstakes award.

In cooperation with the Concert band, the Varsity band journeyed to Terre Haute to serenade the football squads of Indiana State College and of Evansville College.

The members of Girls' Choir participated in many concerts while they trained themselves in the basics of music technique. They learned the meanings of musical symbols and the various types of notes. A test covering this material was given to all Girls' Choir members after the March concert. This training choir participated in all vocal concerts at North giving girls a chance to get the experience needed before joining A Cappella and Varsity Choirs.

Members of Boys' Choir learned the tricks of sight reading and other musical techniques while practicing for and participating in many concerts. During the year, the boys sang both light music and that of a more serious nature. On the secular side was "Vive L'amour," a college song, and "Christmas Is Coming." Boys had a taste of sacred, classical music when they combined with all North Side choirs to sing "The Hallelujah Chorus" and "The Seven Last Words of Christ."

Winning honors, paying for new uniforms, and entertaining spectators at football games highlighted a busy year for North Side's Concert Band.

Under the direction of Mr. C. William Hatt, the concert and varsity bands, in combination, formed the largest single marching band in Indiana. The two instrumentalist groups practiced together each Wednesday evening and then thrilled countless fans during home football game halftimes. Commencing the fall season, the Redskin instrumentalists won for the fifth straight time the "Sweep-stakes," or highest award in the NISBOVA marching contest. This

A Cappella Choir participated in a wide range of activities that included picnicking in a local park and singing in many of the city's churches. Hours of classroom practice prepared them for school concerts, community programs, and music contests. Miss Jeanette Rich, director, chose both sacred and secular music for the choir, placing emphasis on sacred numbers. A Cappella led the combined choirs in singing the "Hallelujah Chorus" from Handel's "Messiah" at Christmas, and at Easter in singing "The Seven Last Words of Christ," a cantata by Dubois.

Varsity choir met sixth period to practice for concerts and contests and participated in a vocal concert presented every season. At Christmas time they sang for the Christ Child Festival and participated in a winter concert under the direction of Miss Jeanette Rich, head of the vocal music department, in which they sang "Allelulia." "Rise Up Shepherd and Foilow," and "Go Tell It on the Mountain." Other vocal and instrumental groups also participated. The music departments gave a spring concert entitled "Seven Last Words of Christ." Members of Varsity Choir have completed Boys' or Girls' Choir and are being trained for A Cappella.

Polar Y Sells Candy to Finance Their Service Project

Officers of Polar Y, Pam Haines, Juanita Altekruse, and Jo Ann Tagt-meyer, discuss plans for the coming meeting.

In preparing for their candy sale, Marsha Jett, Juanita Altekruse, Linda Shinn, and Judy Rhoads artistically make posters.

The goal of all Polar Y members was service to others. Girls attained this goal by sponsoring money-making and service projects. In November the girls participated in the Christ Child Festival, an annual service project. In March, club members sold candy, making money to sponsor a program aiding the underprivileged people of foreign countries.

Besides devoting much of their time to money-making activities for rheir service projects, Polar Y members sponsored many other events. Because of a close affiliation with the YWCA, the club took advantage of the facilities there for many of its activities, including a splash party and a slumber party. Club members and their advisors attended an all-city banquet for all Polar Y girls held at the YWCA. For North's Club, a mother-daughter tea completed this year's activities. This formal event was planned and carried out by club members.

Instrumentalists, Boosters Help Raise School Spirts

A special measure of devotion to North Side tends to lead many instrumentalists to join pep band which plays familiar songs at all home games. Directed by Mr. C. William Hatt, pep band consists of members who belong to other musical groups but who also enjoy playing for games. The group is usually seen practicing the Thursday before each home game.

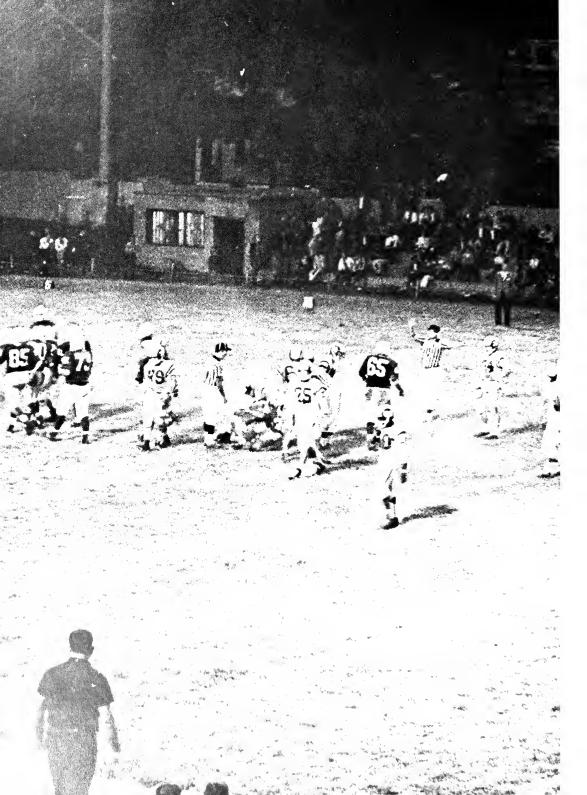

Pep band also plays for the pep sessions and merges with other musical groups for programs during the year.

Booster club, under the sponsorship of Miss Jane Felger, Mr. Dale Goon, and Mr. Noel Whittern, aided the cheerleaders by promoting school spirit among the Redskins. To earn money, the Booster club members sold refreshments to the sports fans attending North Side High's home games. Booster club also sponsored the annual cheerleaders' dance. Booster members gained one point for each hour of toil. Deserving souls, who had labored 275 hours to earn enough points, received "N's" inscribed with the word Booster.

Sports

Aristotle said a strong relationship exists between one's mind and one's physical development. At North Side a high scholastic standard accompanies an organized program of athletics in which all students may participate.

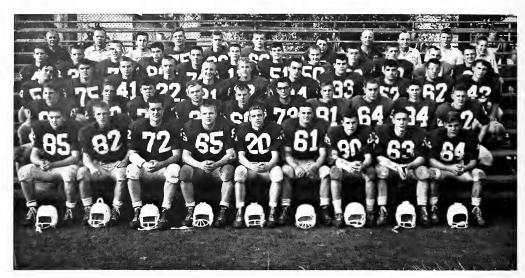

An athletic program exists not only for individuals but also for the whole school. Gym classes give students a chance to shed the classroom tension through swimming, calisthenics, and many games. The cheerleaders, cheerblocks, and the entire student body combine to form the spirit which supports every Redskin team and gives unity and purpose to all school endeavors.

The amount of practice time, and perspiration that takes place before an athletic event is evidence of the athletes' efforts to achieve perfection which ultimately leads to victory. Hitting the dummies in football, pace running in cross country, struggling for tennis form, gaining timing in basketball, warming up in track, and practicing their putting in golf — these are parts of the drive for success.

Whether the contest be a football game, a cross country meet, or a tennis match in the fall, a basketball game in the winter, or a track meet or a golf match in the spring, there must always be a winner and a loser alike. Sportsmanship in both positions is an ultimate goal of the Redskin students and athletes.

With a renaissance in North Side football taking place, the Redskins captured the city championship by defeating all city foes. In over all competition the team finished just under .500 with four wins and five losses.

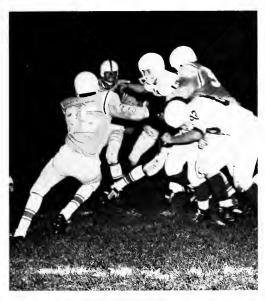

Bill Williams' squad once again faced the ever tough Northern Indiana Conference which included the Elkhart Blue Blazers, mythical state champions. The Elkhart game was climaxed by an excellent goal line stand by the Redskins in the scoreless second half. Elkhart won the game 13 to 0.

The Redskins had great depth, which accounted for much of their success. In the backfield, Coach Williams had the speed and power for balance. Rick Parker, Herb Summers, Rick Thompson, and Tom Kirk provided the speed while Jim McDermott, Rick Deahl, and Mike Hanes provided the power. The line included Lee Richardson, Bob Kinney, Ron Ullyot, Don Rice, and Bill Crist at the ends Jim Johnson, Jack Clawson, Jim Goeglein, Dave Logue, and Steve Whitney played tackle. Dave Bordner, Denny Thompson, Lyman Wible, Dave Fiandt, and Steve Kabisch were the guards. Centers included Doug Montgomery and Tom Spalding. Only nine of the 23 boys listed will be lost by eraduation.

The Redskins' "fire" throughout the season was exceptional. With this excellent spirit, great depth, and experience, Coach Williams feels victory this year was truly a team effort.

Championship; Complete Season Just Under .500 Mark

In a close city series battle, the Tiger defense finally stopped this Redskin drive, but only after North picked up another first down.

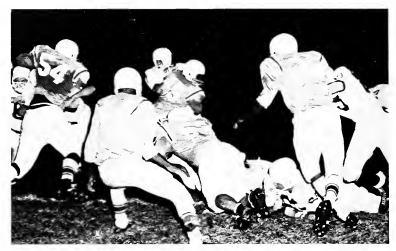

Redskin fans go wild after the gridders scored the winning touchdown in the City Championship game against Central Catholic.

Rick Thompson breaks through a host of Archer tacklers for valuable yardage, as the Redskins gained their second win of the season.

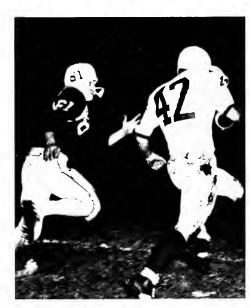

Although the Redskins' back seem to disappear behind the capable blocking of their line, he comes out with a touchdown that gave North it's first victory.

Good Balance Proves Advantage In Prosperous Season

From the sideline, Coach Williams checks the North Side defense which held the South Side Archers scoreless for three quarters.

After breaking away from a Goshen linebacker, Jim McDermott races to the goal line for another Redskin touchdown.

Reserves Take City Crown By Defeating All Five Foes

Outscoring their opponents 83-18, the reserve football team won the city championship for the third straight year and finished the season with five wins, no losses.

One of the reserves' outstanding qualities was their ever strong defense. This squad held three opponents scoreless while allowing the others only one touchdown each—effective practice for the varsity offense.

A great desire to win prevailed throughout their season. Their fine enthusiasm and fighting spirit accounted for their success according to the reserve coach, By Hey. With much speed in their backfield and the small but alert line, the reserves have a bright future

Victorious In Six Meets, Netters Place Third In NIC

Neil Hollister, number one man on the varsity squad, practices his backhand shot at Hamilton Park before a match.

With a majority of victories this season, North Side's Tennis team fulfilled the hopes of Coach Myron Henderson. Winning the first five matches, the Redskins, as last year, were conquered by the netters of Goshen and Elkhart. The team came back victoriously in their last match of the season and finished with a six and two record. On the varsity team Neil Hollister and Ned Lee were number one and two men. The reserves also worked for the benefit of the team and will combine with the veterans in the future.

Linksmen Add Four New Matches to Regular Schedule

Ron Ullyot, Don Meyer, and Dave Moser perfect their swings at the Elks Country Club. These boys were the top candidates for the starting team.

Mr. Beryl Lewis helps find the weak points in Senior Ron Ullyot's swing. "Ron's swing is good," says Mr. Lewis, "but he still needs practice."

In order to interest more high school students in golfing, the next city coaches organized a golf clinic. In Elmhurst High School's gymnasium three area pros talked on all phases of the game from the rules to the equipment necessary to play.

Mr. Beryl Lewis, coach of the team, sets up all the matches. The course for North's linksmen is the Elks Country Club where all of their home meets are held. After all cuts have been made, ten to twelve boys compose the team. The first five are the starting players while the second five have chances to take over the first positions. Mr. Lewis requires that the boys turn in their score cards from their private playing, enabling him to tell who is making the greatest improvement.

All members of the team pay their own green fees even when playing a match. The matches are started at 3:30 p.m. and consist of nine holes match and medal play. Match play deals with the number of holes won or lost, while medal play is the total number of strokes used. A point is scored for each so a ten point shutout is possible.

The sectional meet was at the Elks Country Club in Elkhart, while the state meet was in Indianapolis. The sponsorship for the City Championship meet is passed in alphabetical order to each city school participating. This year's meet was sponsored by Central Catholic which bought trophies for each member of the winning team and its coach. There were six teams taking part in the city meet.

Dave Esterline shows the record-breaking form which enabled him to defeat many opponents and place third in the state meet.

An impressive list of thirteen victories and one loss comprised the Cross Country team's first season under its new coach, Duane Rowe. North finished second in the Northern Indiana Conference Eastern Division, and by defeating all city opponents won the unofficial city championship. The Harriers ended their season by placing fourth in the sectional tournament and eighth in the regionals.

Senior Dave Esterline led the team all season and climaxed the year with a third at state and a new course record at Shoaff Park, the Redskins' new home course. Doing the other scoring this year were letter winners Randy Hatter. John Davis, Joe Houseman, Jim McCrary, and Dan Gerber.

North's Hoopsters Battle to Final Game of Sectional; Win

One of Coach By Hey's jobs during the half of basketball games is instructing and encouroging his team.

The basketball squad had a slow-starting but fast-finishing season in which they compiled a 7-15 over-all record. The young team continually improved, building up to the sectional tournament in which they reached the final game.

In city competition, the Skins won only one game, but lost many close games. Three out of the six losses to city foes were by less than five points. The only victory against rival South Side saw the Red decisively winning.

In conference play the 'Skins stayed out of the Northern Indiana Conference cellar by defeating South Bend Adams in the final regular season game. Earlier they had upset ninth-rated Kokomo in a mid-season game which boosted morale for the rest of the season.

By the time the sectional tournament rolled around, "Hoosier Hysteria" had truly hit North Side. Coach By Hey's Redskins again defeated South Side, this time by twenty-eight points in the opener. They next whipped county jinx Harlan and went on to upset the city co-champs, the Cadets of Concordia in the semi-finals. After a hard fought, heartbreaking game with Central's Tigers in the final, North was on the short side by three points.

The young team never lost their morale through the long season. Head Coach Hey, along with his assistants Roy Cline and Wade Fredrick, felt the team improved steadily and by next year should finish the job they started at the end of this season.

Winning fifteen out of nineteen games, the reserve basketball team captured the Northern Indiana Conference crown and tied Central for the city championship.

In city competition the "Braves" finished with one loss and five victories. The only tarnish to their record was to Central, whom the reserves beat earlier in the season by thirteen points and with whom they shared the city crown.

The reserves also won the Northern Indiana Conference title by winning seven of the nine conference games, losing only to Elkhart and Mishawaka.

Reserve Coach Roy Kline felt "the team's desire to play, not only the night of the game but every night, was a big reason for their success." He believes good teamwork, good rebounding, good defense, and good poise accounted for many of their victories.

Redskin reserves, closing in on a frustrated South Bend Adams player, conclude their season with another victory.

Basketball managers Larry Ellenwood, Joe Culver, and Dave Friedrich take equipment to the gym for practice preceding the sctionals.

Massaging tight muscles was only part of job of track field manager Neil Nagel. He also spent much time keeping valuable day-to-day records.

Laundry, Equipment, First-Aid Part of Managers' Job

Approximately six miles was the estimate Jack Smith gave as the amount of tape used in binding athletes this year. Jack and Bruce Davenport were the full-time equipment managers during all three seasons, spending over six hundred hours at the job. Each week they visited the local laundromat with an average of fifty pounds of grimy socks, shorts, shirts, and towels and, over the course of the year, used almost fifty pounds of soap. Other chores included checking equipment to athletes out and in, keeping it in good repair, and during the game or meets, administering first aid.

The managers associated with the specific sport held the title of field manager. During the daily practices, they assisted the coaches and athletes on the field, and in meets and games they kept the statistics and records.

In the fall Jim Hatfield and Carl Geist assisted the gridders while Dave Heffley and Larry Walter worked with the cross country squad. Larry Ellenwood, Dave Friedrich, and Joe Culver took over the basketball duties and Neil Nagel, Larry Walter, Joe Culver, and Terry Schuster asisted the track team. The managerial staff was under the general supervision of the new athletic manager, Mr. Robert Traster.

1963 State Championship Under Head Coach Duane Rowe

Defending a title is not an easy task; defending the I.H.S.A.A. state track title is a job for only the very ambitious indeed. Being an ambitious lot, the track squad started its monumentous job in late November, extremely early as track seasons go. A typical workout was one hour in length, but they accomplished in one what other teams did in three. Twenty minutes was spent on rapid-fire calisthenics with no time to rest between exercises. A third of the hour was also spent on weight lifting and isometric exercises, dull but necessary chores. Equal time was used for some form of runing, whether it be sprints, long distance, or practice starts. Although the boys were obliged to run on the outside of the yellow line in order to avoid collisions with the diagonal cement beams; all this was possible only because of the corridor circling the top of the gym. The team worked with such intensity that when they met Culver Military in early March, they ran the cadets into the cinders by a score of 72 to 37.

Those boys returning from last year's championship team formed the nucleus of this year's hopeful repeaters. Dave Esterline was outstanding in the distance events, Paul Paino and Rick Thompson sparkled in the dashes, while Herb Summers, Don Bradley, and Jim Irwin formed the core of a speedy mile relay team.

Dave Esterline defeats arch-rival Ken Ellingwood of South Side in the grueling mile, one of the highlights of the sectionals.

Cheerleaders Get Great Responses From Redskin Fans

Raising the roof with mighty yells was common for the fans at North's

Georgia Barnett. Kay Nemyer, Captain Sue Riley, Vicki Witmer, Jill Borkenstein, and Carol Meyers.

Sue Riley headed the varsity cheerleading squad, and Linda James took over the lead position for the reserves as the cheerleaders were chosen by the Student Council for the first time. The purpose was to get responsible as well as athletically inclined girls. Miss Jane Felger, faculty adviser for these squads, believed that the council did an excellent job of picking the girls best qualified for these positions. In devotion to duty these leaders attended every away game by going on the fan buses or riding with Miss Felger. As for the quality of their rheerleading, this was illustrated by the rousing responses that the crowds gave.

Adding color and life to the cheers at the home games was the girl's cheerblock. This group, in their red and white uniforms, performed many emotion-rilled cheers and some well-planned group motions. Much of the cheerblock's success was accredited to Mrs. Janet Weber, who supervised the group. The 208 regulars, selected from a long list of applicants, showed the true Redskin shirit.

Sparking the spirit of the fans are North's reserve cheerleaders.

Varsity squad cheers for a Redskin football victory.

Reserves and Girls' Cheerblock Add Color to All Games

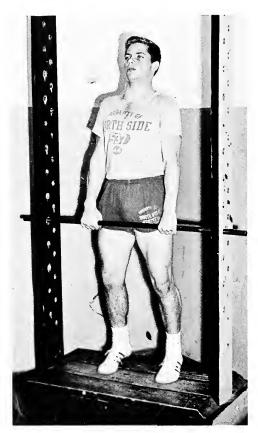

Captain Linda James, Jackie Scott, Mimi Littlejohn, and Penny Winkler served as the reserve cheerleading squad.

With their catchy yells and rhymes, the girl's cheerblock displayed the spirit that was typical of North Side fans. Their bright smiles and colorful uniforms added greatly to the athletic contests.

Tight Schedule Makes Intramural Program Impossible

lsometrics are an essential part of an athlete's practice. Tom Kirk illustrates his belief in its muscle building powers.

Tom McKean adds his name to the school's list of record holders in individual events. Tom tied a record that has stood for ten years.

Overcrowded conditions and an irregular school day made it impossible to have an organized intramural program. Despite the problems involved, some intramural type activities have been carried on at times during the school day. Sophomores took athletic tests based on a point-system. These were given under the supervision of Mr. Donald Kemp who said, "You never know when one of these boys will be inspired and break a record."

Some students have also been interested enough in activities to form their own teams. A good example of this was the recreational bowling organized by Doug Cartwright.

The athletes whose sports were out of season worked hatd even though they were not permitted to have practices. The football team was one group that showed their willingness to participate even without the school as a sponsor for their activities. They often worked out individually with the track team to get in good condition.

Jerry Wilt works out after school in the weight room. Activities like these provide good body conditioning for one's apare time.

Education, Relaxation Part of Athletes' Daily Routine

Many athletes worked in the coaches' office during their study period and helped the coaches with some of their paper work.

Enjoying some fudge made by a loyal fan, all-around athlete Herb Summers tries a less vigorous sport.

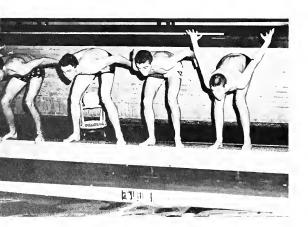

Boys Participate In Three Part Program During Phys-Ed

Basketball, volleyboll, and many other games helped boys to release the scholastic tension during their physical education classes.

Swimmers to your marks . . . GO! Sophomore boys enjoyed their swimming classes in which they learned many aspects of the water sport.

The "tread-mill" proved a builder of coordination and stamina while also being a good exercise for loosening up during calisthenics.

The boys and girls physical education classes enabled students to shed the classroom tension through many activities. These classes are required for all Redskin students for at least one of their three years at the Dome.

Spotts and games, swimming, and physical development were the three patts of this year's physical education classes for boys. After being given a physical aptitude test, the boys were placed according to their scores and ability in either A, B, or C groups during their period. Running to the Parnell Street bridge and back, lifting weights, and learning elementary gymnastics composed the physical development part. Sports and games included basketball, softball, flag football, and volleyball. Swimming classes learned water games, racing techniques, and different strokes. Mr. Harold Clinkenbeard taught all swimming classes while Mt. Donald Kemp, Mr. Bill Williams and Mr. By Hey taught the other classes of boys' physical education.

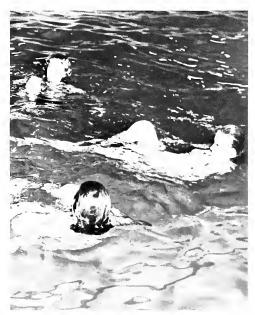

Miss Ruth Carroll and Miss Janice Michiels were in charge of the girls gym classes. The girls participated in a variety of games, exercises, and dances. Dodgeball, jumping rope, balancing, gymnastics and modern dancing composed most of the year along with some archery and softball in the fall and spring. Miss Michiels also taught beginning, intermediate, and advanced swimming. These classes learned beginning techniques, strokes, and aquatic ballet.

Many Activities Keep Girls Slim, Trim In Gym Classes

the well-rounded gym class activities in which girls are required to participate for at least a year.

During their swim class, the girls learned many forms of aquatic ballet as well as several water sports and games.

While becoming skillful in the art of archery, Miss Carroll's physical education classes obtained some outside professional help.

Closing

Three years seems like an age to the average teenager. Yet these three years of high school life pass almost before we know that they have disappeared. Sophomores, juniors, and seniors change, mature, form their personalities, and grow up in these three most important years. Our entire adult lives will be shaped and influenced by what we see, do, hear, and learn in high school. In twenty or thirty or fifty years we will still remember and cherish the ideas, the fun, and the memories of our years at North Side and enjoy looking back on them.

But we will not stop growing and changing the moment we get our diplomas. As we grow older we will integrate the knowledge and experience gained from our three years at North Side High School with the knowledge and experience that we will acquire in later years. And so, we can never be exactly the same in mind and in body as we were in 1964. But it will be possible for us to recapture the events, the spirit, and the youth of North Side High School in 1964. By reopening the pages of the 1964 "Legend," we will be able to briefly revive the memories of 1964, but we can never possess them again because with everything that we do we will change and we will grow.

Mary Anglin and Bonnie Rudensky
